- ***Education report cautions against another major overhaul Karen Power, author of anglophone report, says important to avoid another major reform or shift in direction***

Posted: June 17, 2016

The New Brunswick government is being urged to strengthen the education system, but one author of the recommendations is cautioning against yet another abrupt change or major overhaul. Karen Power and Gino LeBlanc released their reports Friday that will form the basis for a 10-year education plan being developed by the Gallant Liberals. Education commission [\[...more\]](#)

- ***Dual busing court case is latest stop in twisting legal road Legal expert Michel Doucet says the Supreme Court changed how courts interpret language cases in 1999 decision***

Posted: June 15, 2016

It's been a long and twisting legal road from the constitutional entrenchment of New Brunswick's language duality in 1993 to Wednesday's court hearing on dual buses. The Court of Appeal will spend two days dealing with procedural issues in the constitutional reference case, with full arguments expected in the fall. The Liberal government argues duality [\[...more\]](#)
